Costantino Gucci

Costantino Gucci, born in Florence in 1992, lives and works in Milan. After studying Product Design at Central Saint Martins in London, he developed a practice that moves between design and sculpture. His research explores reflection both as a material condition and as a metaphor, engaging with themes of perception, identity, and illusion through unstable, ever-shifting surfaces. Mirrors and glass become living organisms that respond to light and space, transforming each encounter into a singular, unrepeatable experience. At the heart of his work is the viewer: the artwork does not exist in isolation, but takes shape through its relationship with the observer, constantly redefining the space that hosts it. His work has been featured in contexts of artistic research and contemporary design, and now enters, for the first time, a solo exhibition that reveals the formal and conceptual universe behind his practice.

Ilior

Ilior is a series of sculptural tables in which solid geometry embraces the instability of reflection. Made of mirror, wavy glass, and gradient ink fading from black to orange, these objects contrast squared forms and defined volumes with unstable and perceptually shifting surfaces that alter the viewer's sense of surrounding space. Each table is a reflective body in transformation, where the material reflects, distorts, and absorbs, generating constantly shifting reflections. These are not merely mirrored surfaces, but living presences that respond to light and to the movement of the observer, dissolving the boundary between object and illusion.
