Inlay Bench

Inlay is a technique that inserts various unique materials into the concave surface of the original object. Using inlay technique, Sipyong Lee made up of leather and iron plates, which are different materials to one surface.

The users can separate this furniture that seems to be one unit into two units for their convenience, and the inlaid leather on the upper part be tanned drastically than the leather on the side part-cut section due to user's contact and environment over time. Through these changes and contrasts, Sipyong Lee wanted to show the relationship between two different materials.
